

During October, ALT had the privilege of getting a new perspective of the four acres of land given to them by the Lord, situated in Annalong, in the Mourne Mountains.

Michael and his BBC camera crew, through the use of a helicopter, were able to take aerial photography of the topography. No, not for the purpose of cartography, but the geography would be part of a biography the BBC plans to broadcast in the Spring of next year.

To be called "Born Again", the BBC plans to examine the lives of three families from three different denominations, to explore what it really means to be a born again Christian. Hopefully, and prayerfully, this will be a good opportunity to get the gospel across to a needy nation.

Michael and Gary also spent time interviewing family members, and filmed one of the services at our own Bethesda Gospel Hall, Bangor. The BBC were very interested in what ALT was about, along with other day to day activities the family is involved in.

So watch out for Born Again. It seems the Lord has provided a unique opportunity to ALT, that will bring glory to Him.
